

CONNECTICUT

Connecticut voters will select their choice for governor, attorney general, and treasurer this November. All 36 senate seats and all 151 house seats are also up for election. Democrats are expected to maintain control of all state executive offices and hold supermajorities in the house and senate.

Attorney General

Republican Nominee

John Bolton

John Bolton has practiced law for over 36 years, earning his JD from the University of Connecticut School of Law. He previously served on the Westport Planning and Zoning Commission, working on issues related to land use and housing. In 2024, Bolton competed for a seat in the Connecticut House, ultimately losing in the general election to Representative Jonathan Steinberg (D).

Bolton's campaign centers on his "Standing Up For Connecticut" agenda which focuses on consumer protections, state government transparency, public safety, and parental rights.

Bolton pledges to hold utility companies accountable for their impact on rate increases and will ensure that these companies utilize fair pricing practices. He also plans to take legal action against neighboring states when they restrict Connecticut's access to affordable energy and pollute water resources.

Bolton plans to investigate AI-driven pricing practices and explore policies that protect seniors from financial exploitation and scams. Bolton opposes private equity takeovers of hospitals and mitigate hospital mergers that reduce competition.

To restore government transparency and accountability, Bolton plans to make the attorney general's office a watchdog over state government, contractors, nonprofits, and NGOs. This would involve publishing annual reports on the office's activities.

Bolton is a staunch advocate of parental rights over their children's education, emphasizing that parents deserve transparency over curriculum, classroom materials, counseling practices, and health-related information.

Trivia: Bolton served on Governor John Rowland's (R) task force to retain the Hartford Whalers.
