

ARIZONA

Voters in Arizona will elect a governor, Lt. governor, attorney general, and treasurer. All executive races are considered to be competitive. All 30 state senate seats and all 60 state house seats are up for reelection. Republicans currently hold narrow majorities in both chambers. Democrats are targeting the legislature in an effort to gain control of one or both chambers, making Arizona one of the key state legislative battlegrounds in 2026.

Governor

Republican Nominee

U.S. Representative Andy Biggs

An Arizona native, Biggs began his political career in the Arizona Legislature, serving eight years in the house and six years in the senate before being elected Senate President in 2012. He was elected to Congress in 2016 and currently serves on the House Judiciary and Oversight and Government Reform committees. He previously chaired the House Freedom Caucus and serves as co-chair of the Border Security Caucus. Biggs is a retired attorney who earned a bachelor's degree from Brigham Young University, a master's degree in political science from Arizona State University, and a law degree from the University of Arizona.

As a candidate for governor, Biggs is presenting himself as a conservative focused on lowering costs, securing the border, expanding reliable energy, strengthening water policy, and limiting government intervention. Biggs highlights his endorsements from President Trump and the late Charlie Kirk.

Biggs is pledging to make Arizona more affordable by lowering taxes, encouraging job growth, and reducing government regulations. He is calling for stronger coordination with the Trump administration and local law enforcement to secure the southern border and combat drug and human trafficking.

Biggs is also emphasizing Arizona's long-term energy and water needs. His campaign supports expanding reliable and affordable energy sources to reduce utility and gasoline costs, while advocating for changes to water and land management aimed at supporting population growth and increasing the supply of single-family housing.

He also supports school choice, the "MAHA" agenda, and making election integrity a central issue. He has pledged to pursue legislation aimed at ensuring timely election results and restricting voting participation to eligible Arizona citizens.

The Cook Political Report and The Center For Politics Sabato's Crystal Ball have rated this race as Leans Democratic.

Trivia: Before entering politics, Biggs was a professional rodeo competitor and competed in bareback riding.
